

Welcome Aboard the Audiobahn

702 volunteer, verified sites

Here's the Winter 2012 list of North American broadcasters, talent, and studios with dialup digital audio. They've agreed to be listed so you can call them when you need a facility for newsfeeds, remotes, audio transfers, or other long-distance audio services.

All services are optional, and all fees are negotiable between the studios involved. We (Jay Rose's Digital Playroom, an audio post house in Boston) maintain this list as a public service to help codec owners find each other... after that, it's up to you.

There's no charge to be on this list or to receive it. All you need is a codec and willingness to join in. Be sure to read the submission and copyright information on the last page.

How do you use this list? Look up the desired city in columns 2 and 3. (Our few Canadian listings are all marked with CN as the state; Mexican ones with MX.) Check column 1 for the type of codec a site uses (a key appears on the last page of this list). Most types are compatible at one standard or another, so you should be able to talk to anybody on the list.

Then call the voice number listed and set up the session. If you're cross-connecting different brands of codec at any standard beyond plain-vanilla G.722, we recommend a test before committing to an important session or live broadcast. (A few strangenesses exist in the way different manufacturers transmit similar data, and sometimes specifications change during the life of a product.)

 R RE 661/662 G.722, MPEG Layer II
 Z Zephyr G.722, MPEG Layer II, MPEG Layer III, some have AAC

Issues of this compilation and its predecessor "Zephyrlist" are © 1995-2012 Jay Rose. You may distribute it as long as these two conditions are met:

- 1) No fee can be charged for either this data or for access to it and the data can't be included in a commercial publication, as part of the sale of a product (except manufacturers mentioned herein may include the list with their products), or as input to a mailing list; and
- 2) The entire list must be kept intact, including all text as well as data and this copyright notice. This also means you can't quote or extract data from the list for other purposes, including phone lists. I'm trying to keep people from being bothered.

To submit or update listings, send email to abahn@dplay.com. Please match our data format, using ` [backwards apostrophe, usually found on the same key as a ~ tilde] instead of tabs, normal Upper and Lower Case, and no spaces between fields: Codec (see above key) `State `City `Company Name `Booking contact name `area/phone`email. If you want to be listed in a city and its neighborhood, please submit that way (e.g.: LA:Hollywood). Phone must be in format 123/456-7890. Email address is for reference and verification, and will not be publicized.

Example:

Z`MA`Boston`Digital Playroom`Jay Rose`617/277-0041`Jay@dplay.com

We promise that submissions not matching this format will get lost.

The list is updated approximately once a year, and posted on the web at www.dplay.com, in Acrobat format only. Codec manufacturers and dealers may distribute hard copies, but only as a free service. This list is intentionally limited to North America and concentrates on open-access standards like MPEG (Zephyr, Prima, etc).

We gratefully thank Telos and Comrex for their support in setting up this list and checking the technical descriptions. Any errors in those descriptions are purely the fault of the author, who is glad to consider additions or changes.

Codecs are getting better at coping with packet loss, and let's face it, 128 kbps is pretty darned slow by today's standards. Our studio has completely replaced ISDN with streaming Internet technologies, both for higher quality and lower cost. But we'll still maintain this list and keep it on our website.

Jay Rose CAS is an Emmy- and Clio-winning audio post specialist and sound designer whose clients include A&E, Discovery, Turner TV, Buena Vista, MGM, PBS, NPR, and local broadcasters throughout the US (that's a plug). He's also an officer of the AES, has designed software for major audio manufacturers Orban and Eventide, wrote columns on various audio production subjects for Digital Video Magazine and ProVideoCoalition, and has written Producing Great Sound for Film & Video and Audio Postproduction for Film & Video (at local stores and amazon.com; details at dplay.com). Zephyr and Telos Systems are registered trademarks of TLS Corporation. Nexus and Comrex are registered trademarks of Comrex Corporation. The Musicam implementation of MPEG Layer II and its trademark belong to Musicam USA.

Postings are as submitted; we don't guarantee their accuracy. Listing means a site has said they've got compatible equipment, and is not a recommendation or endorsement.
